'Persuade Pak and India to halt N-race'

Arm-twisting won't help: US

WASHINGTON, April 12, (AP): Both India and Pakistan are capable of making atomic weapons, so the United States must rely on political persuasion rather than restrictions on aid or technology to prevent their manufacture, says a senior State Department official

"For Pakistan as for India, the barrier to acquisition of nuclear weapons is now political, not technical," Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Howard Schaffer said in testimony prepared for a House of Representative appropriations subcommittee.

"We believe that neither country has crossed the nuclear (weapons) threshold, and both governments desire to avoid a nuclear arms race," he added. "US policy must strive to reduce motivations to go nuclear by either country.

Background

Schaffer's statement came against a background of declara-tions by the Indian and Pakistani Prime Ministers, Rajiv Gandhi and Benazir Bhutto respectively, that they did not want to possess atomic weapons but that acquisition of the weapons by the other could force reconsideration.

India staged an atomic explosion in 1974. Pakistan has been accused over the years of importing materials needed for nuclear weapons,

Schaffer reaffirmed that the United States will continue to on aid to countries with nuclear facilities outside international inspection or believed directed at achieving weapons capability.

"It would be counter-productive for the US to cut off assistance to Pakistan or impose additional non-proliferation restrictions on our aid, since this would sharply reduce our ability to influence Pakistan's nuclear policy," he said. Reasonable Continuation of the current six-year multibillion-dollar package of US military and economic aid to Pakistan also assumes that President Bush will continue to be able to make the annual certification that ... Pakistan does not possess a nuclear explosive device" and that the aid will reduce its likelihood of acquiring one, said acting Deputy Assistant Defence Secretary Frederick Smith.

Smith said that from a military point of view, Pakistan's desire to buy more US F-16 jet fighters is reasonable and justified ... to maintain approximately the current air balance with India." In the case of India, Schaffer said, in the past five years, the United States has been making naval visits and has begun providing some military items including components for a light combat aircraft project. In this way, the United States is helping to reduce India's military dependence on the Soviet Union, he terrorist acts

WASHINGTON, April 12. (AP): Terrorism increased worldwide to a new record in 1988. while the number of anti-US incidents increased in all regions, the State Department reported to Congress yesterday.

The bombing of a Pan Am jetliner in December, which the department's Office to Counter terrorism said probably was terrorism, and incidents stemming from the Palestinian uprising on the West Bank and in Gaza helped push the total of a new high of 856, a three per cent jump over 832 in 1987.

As a result, 658 people were killed and 1,131 wounded, an increase in fatalities from 633 in 1987, but a decrease in injuries from 2,272 in 1987.

The United States, the report said, remained a primary target for international terrorism, as the number of anti-US incidents rose from 149 in 1987 to 185 last year. This resulted in 192 persons killed and 40 wounded, compared with seven Americans killed and 47 wounded in 1987.

The increase was due largely to the attack on Pam Am 103 in which 259 people aboard the jumbo jet and 11 on the ground equivalent to the energy released in burning 10 tons of coal. Since then, researchers world-wide have been trying to duplicate their efforts.

Texas A and M University and the Georgia Institute of Technology announced on Monday confirmation of key parts of the experiment, but warned the energy release might be just a bizarre chemical "This means that there will be an increased effort to determine what the source or nature of this new reaction is, Pons said on Monday. "The reaction is most likely nuclear. It can't be explained any other way, but the scientific community will have to now try to understand the process involved."

Pons and Fleischmann said hydrogen nuclei apparently fused in their experiment, giving off excess energy.

Fusion, the energy source of the sun, results from the joining of atomic nuclei. If fusion could be harnessed, researchers believe it could be a cheaper. safer alternative to the nuclear power plants that operate on fission, the splitting of atoms.

Fleischmann left UK yesterday to continue his work at a secret location. Fleischmann said he would contact the Texas A and M scientists to see what they had achieved.

Many scientists have implied that the Fleischmann-Pons experiment was flawed. But others at Utah's Brigham Young University and in Hungary have also claimed success in achieving fusion by similar methods.

Both the Fleischmann-Pons and Texas results were produced at room temperature. Most fusion research has been based on the assumption the reaction could only occur at temperatures as high as 100 million degrees Centigrade (180 million Fahren-

Rising seas may inundate London

LONDON, April 12, (UPI): Many of Britain's cities, including London, may disappear ben-eath the sea in the next 50 years unless action is taken to combat global warming, an environmental report said yesterday.

Drug barons seek devil's help

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, April 12, (AP): Authorities who found 12 male bodies in graves at a ranch in Mexico say the victims were sacrificed by a satanic cult of drug smugglers.

"It was horrible," Cameron county Sheriff Alex Perez told a news conference in this border city yesterday. "It was like a human slaughterhouse."

Mexican federal judicial police arrested four people, said Sheriff's Lieut George Gavito. Gavito said the suspects were US and Mexican citizens.

Gavito said the dead found by year-old University of Texas student Mark Kilroy, who vani-shed during his spring break last month while in the Mexican city of Matamoros, across the border from Brownsville. Kilroy apparently was chosen at random by drug smugglers who hoped human sacrifices would protect them from harm. Gavito said. He was taken after the cult members "were told to pick one Anglo male that par-ticular night," the lieutenant The cult had been involved in human sacrifices for about nine months, he said, and prayed to the devil "so the police would not arrest them, so bullets would not kill them and so they could make more money."

Authorities found candles and kettles full of body parts and animal bones, said Oran Neck, chief US customs agent in Brow nsville.

A small colour snapshot displayed at the news conference showed a caldron containing a dark, red liquid and what appeared to be bones. Another picture showed 12 body bags.

Authorities would not identify the other victims, but said all were males.

One grave held three bodies and another contained two, said Neck. Some victims were shot in the head, while others appeared to have been slain with machetes or sledgehammers, the agent

The bodies were found yesterday morning in a field about 20 miles (30 kilometres) west of Matamoros, Gavito said.

"I've been an investigator 15 years and it's one of the worst things I've ever seen," he said. Kilroy's brain was missing, said Brownsville Herald photographer Anthony Padilla, who said he saw the body at a Matamoros funeral home. "There was nothing inside the skull," Padilla said. In some forms of witchcraft, removal of the brain signifies a sacrifice of the victim's soul. Padilla said Kilroy's legs were cut off at mid-calf and his spine was severed and twisted. The case is being investigated by US customs, the US attorneygeneral's office, Mexican federal authorities and local police departments on both sides of the border.

MEXICO CITY, April 12, (AP): Suspected drug boss Miguel Angel Felix Gallardo, said to be Mexico's biggest drug trafficker, was charged yesterday with possession, trafficking and transportation of illegal drugs.

"I don't know why they connect me with the cocaine business," he said after being read the charges in the 10th district penal court. "I have never had that type of dealings."

Felix Gallardo denied statements from another reputed drug traf-ficker that he used several airplanes to transport drugs from South America to various parts of Mexico and sometimes across the border to the United States.

Reverse osmosis method successful Water desalination has improved noticeably developed new engineering experiences and prepared new Kuwaiti manpower, according to Dr Mahmoud Abdul Jawad, the director of the water desalination department at Kuwait Institute for Scientific Research (KISR).

He added that Kuwait's overall production power of desalinated sea water has improved noticeably during the past three decades. Daily production of desalinated sea water increased from two million imperial gallons to 215 million imperial gallons. Kuwait now has five desalination stations instead of one.

In an interview with Seyassah/Arab Times, he pointed out that the reverse osmosis system for water desalination was first implemented in 1973. The method was developed fast as the result of added improvements in equipment. An experimental reverse osmosis water desalination station was established in Doha to ensure the feasibility of this technique under local conditions. Doha station now produces 800 thousand imperial gallons daily, Abdul Jawad said. A joint research programme was agreed upon between West Germany and Kuwait which is represented by the Ministry of Electricity and Water, and KISR. The research programme aims at evaluating three different groups of reverse osmosis technique under conditions similar to that of Kuwait. The programme will also conduct a comparison on costs between using the old desalination method and the new reverse osmosis method. Abdul Jawad pointed that the programme objectives are going in the right direction and ensuring high quality.

Ferrying across in comfort

THE Public Transportation Company sea fleet is capable of fulfilling company objectives until the early 90's, according to the assistant managing director for technical and marine affairs, Bader

Abdul Wahab Al Najar. In an interview with a local daily, he said the fleet includes twelve ferries and that there is no need to increase the fleet over the next two years even though some ferries may be put out of operation because they are old. New boats

Najar said that the company will put four ferries out of operation in 1992, when new boats will take their place. He expressed the company's keenness in keeping up with the marine engineering field and to provide ferries which include comfort, security and

"In addition to the fact that the company transports passengers between Kuwait and Failaka, it also has a comprehensive programme of tours for summer 1989", Najar said. The company will organise two "QerQian" parties aboard the ferry Miskan, and will also operate tours around the Kuwaiti coastline both morning and evening from 6am to 2am every day.

He added that the company organised 19 private trips last month. These tours were introduced by the company to banks, private companies and government establishment staff interested in having parties on one of the ferries, or just going on tours of Najar stated that since islands in Kuwait lack touristic characteristics, more emphasis should be put upon the development of touristic programmes on these islands in order to attract more local tourists and expatriates. He expressed the company's readiness to operate trips to all Kuwaiti islands, but he added that the problem is that most of these islands lack ports.

He added that officials should look over these islands in order to create other retreats apart from

The company will see the operating of touristic ferries to chalets being established by the Touristic Enterprises Corporation in the Subiya area.

He expressed that the company is willing to operate touristic ferries and ships to Bahrain and Basta as well, but he stated that the idea would require some time before implementation. Other future plans include operating journeys aboard air-conditioned ferries to Khiran park.

Obstacles Regarding obstacles faced by the company, Najar said that the main part of the company's services concentrates on transporting residents of Failaka, contractors working there or government employees from and to Kuwait.

The company has made great steps in adopting modern and advanced facilities due to the fact that Kuwait sea areas are very shallow and are swept by northern and southern winds throughout the year. The company requires more sophisticated ferries to overcome these natural marine conditions, Najar said. The company was able to obtain two such ferries considered to be the most advanced in the world, which entered into service last October.

Haiti coup mystery

Many questions remain

By Paul Iredale

PORT-AU-PRINCE, (Reuter): Haitian leader General Prosper Avril appears to have crushed a serious military revolt, but in a culture of fear and charade many unanswered questions remain.

After a constant 19-hour barrage of artillery, machine-gun and small arms fire, during which citizens of Port-au-Prince cowered in their homes, the Catholic church's radio Soleil reported 30 soldiers and four civilians killed in the fighting.

Avril's government said simply that "the soldiers of the Presidential Guard now occupy the (rebel) Dessalines barracks. Honour to their

It added that the majority of the rebels had been captured, but gave no details of the assault or casualties. Later it became apparent that much of the artillery fire involved blank shells.

The takeover of the barracks at the last weekend appears to have defused a week of high tension in Haiti that began with an abortive coup attempt against Avril on April 2. When it failed it was followed by revolts at Dessalines and the Leopards anti-subversive unit on the eastern outskirts of Port-au-Prince.

"In Haiti, you should not believe anything you hear and only half of what you see," a US diplomat here is fond of saying.

In a society where voodoo culture and three decades of dictatorial rule by "Papa Doc" and "Baby Doc" Duvalier have made fear, intrigue and sleight of hand potent political weapons, where the spirit of the infamous Tontons Macoutes — literally, the bogeymen — still holds sway, the diplomat's remark is significant.

Restricted to their hotels by a dusk-to-dawn curfew imposed by Avril when the mutiny began a week ago, Western journalists were slow to catch on, and many Haitians slower still, to the fact that much of the artillery fire involved the use of blank shells.

After the fighting had stopped, journalists saw several shell holes in and around the Dessalines barracks in central Port-au-Prince — but nothing like the damage that normally would have accompanied a barrage of the magnitude they had heard.

Why, then, did Avril submit his capital to a barrage that would have done justice to a heavy day of fighting in Beirut, but without the civilian

Was it to terrify the mutinous soldiers into submission? Or were the rebels firing the artillery, using scare tactics to intimidate the attacking Presidential Guard? Or was there some more sinister motive, aimed at terrifying the general population? In Haiti, such questions normally remain unanswered.

A senior Western diplomat, an admirer of Avril, said the President had taken a decision "that was very costly to him" to purge the military Reiterating Avril's public explanation of events, the diplomat said the coup attempt followed the President's decision to sack four officers linked to drug trafficking.

"There is absolutely no doubt they (the coup plotters) were in contact with Duvalierists abroad," he added.

"The hard fact is that the Duvalier people wanted to retain control of the government ... they were going to reintroduce a reign of terror."
"Now he (Avril) really will be able to start a cleanup that is badly needed in the Army."

Conspiracy Theorists, pointing to the fact that Avril served as security chief to Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier and has extensive links with the old regime, say he is tarred with the same corrupt brush and moved against other officers purely to consolidate his hold on

This view is echoed by some of the young soldiers in revolt, who are brought him to power and maintain he is trying to impose a dictatorship

US doing nothing

KUWAIT. (KUNA): A local daily has accused the new US administration of President George Bush of doing nothing to advance the Mideast

Al Rai Al Aam said it was improbable for Bush, who served as vice-president in the past eight years, to wait for Israeli Premier Yitzhak Shamir's peace offers to draw his administration's policy of how to settle the chronic Mideast crisis.

The paper said that Washington, embarrassed by the PLO conces sions, "hopes that everything would collapse, though slowly."

They wish that would come about through Shamir's proposals of self-rule to elected Palestinian municipalities that are interlinked with Israel politically, economically and militarily and are totally rejected by the Arabs and Palestinians.

Ex-King Zahir Shah's Daimler revives memories of the past

Problem is finding a key to his return

By Earleen Fisher

KABUL, Afghanistan, (AP): The limousine of the last Afghan king waits in the dust in a padlocked shed near the old royal palace. The black Daimler's tyres are flat, but the silver royal crest on the door is

The car is an apt analogy for Zahir Shah, the 74-year-old exiled monarch whose return is discussed by Afghans across the political ectrum as a way of ending the d authoritarian government and Muslim fundamentalists.

Sixteen years after he was deposed, the ex-king remains a symbol of better days - of a time when Afghans were not slaughtering each other in horrific numbers.

The problem is finding the key to his return.

The car is ready for him. It would be good if he came back," said a man who knew the whereabouts of Zahir Shah's Daimler but did not want to be indentified.

Others are less fearful of speaking out.
"I have said openly that if King Zahir Shah wants to work for his country, he can have a positive role in bringing peace," said Wadir Safi, dean of law and political science at Kabut University.

"Even if he didn't do much for the progress of our country, he didn't kill anybody," Safi said.

About a month ago Safi's views were published in a new weekly newspaper, Akbar-e-Hasta. The article was accompanied by the first photograph of the king that Kabul residents can remember seeing in the government-supervised media since he was overthrown in 1973.

The issue quickly sold out, although its price of 10 afghanis is four of five times that of other newspapers. Even illiterate people scrambled for copies.

"All the people like Zahir Shah," said a shopkeeper who spoke on condition of anonymity. "In Zahir Shah's time, there was not killing of people."

Future role

Even President Najib, a former secret-police chief, has said talks with the ex-king could be useful. In mid-February, Najib said he had sent emissaries to Zahir Shah's exile home in Italy. A spokesman for the ageing ex-monarch promptly denied any such contact with the Soviet-

The US-backed mujahedeen guerrillas, operating from headquarters across the border in Pakistan, are divided about the king's return.

Any future role for him in Afghanistan has been flatly rejected by the mujahedeen's hardline fundamentalists, such as Rasul Sayyaf, leader of one of the seven parties in the guerrilla alliance based in Peshawar,

Some of the more moderate leaders — such as Ahmad Gailani, who once served as the king's religious adviser — say they would accept his return as a constitutional monarch, a sort of living flag to help unite the Afghan people. The king himself seems amenable to coming home.

In early February, as the Soviet Union was withdrawing its last soldiers from Afghanistan and ending nine years of combat support for ent, Zabir Shah said: "I am prepared to render without any claim or precondition any service to my country which would reflect the will of the majority of my compatriots. The sticky question is how to reconcile the poles-apart politics of Najib's People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan, the mujahedeen's Islamic fundamentalism and a monarchy. The mujahedeen refuse to deal with the party, whose communist beginnings have never taken root among the fervently capitalist Afghans. The party, whose leadership changes have come only through coup, assassination or purge, says it is willing to "share" power but will never step aside completely. In four decades on the throne, Zahir Shah proved to be a less-than-dynamic leader.

He was only 19 in 1933 when he became king upon the assassination of his father, Nadir Shah. For the next 20 years, his uncles ran the

In 1953, Zahir Shah's cousin, Mohammad Daoud, became prime minister and tried to push a feudalistic, tribal nation toward modernisation, by such means as bringing women out from under their allenveloping head-to-toe veils.

In 1963, Zahir Shah finally exerted himself. Daoud resigned, waited a decade, and overthrew his cousin the king. Five years later in 1978, Daoud was assassinated in a coup that brought the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan to power with a succession of strongman leaders. Since then, an estimated one million Afghans have been killed in the war between the government and the guerrillas. Another five million have fled to neighbouring Pakistan and Iran, leaving Afghanistan with a population of 10 million. Throughout the war, Zahir Shah's Daimler, a car that is somehow sleek and bulky at the same time, has remained unscathed. Periodically, it is dusted by a man with only childhood memories of the monarchy, a man who does not want to give his name and hopes the

PLO gaining legitimacy in Israel

By Joel Greenberg

JERUSALEM: Slowly, inexorably, and despite government opposition, the Palestine Liberation Organisation is gaining legitimacy

as a negotiating partner in Israeli eyes.

While the PLO is officially rejected as a terrorist group dedicated to Israel's destruction, increasing numbers of Israelis are arguing that talks with the organisatioin are inescapable if a workable peace settlement is to be reached with the Palestinians. The palpable change in attitude has been accelerated by the recent changes in the PLO's political positions - specifically, its recognition of Israel and acceptance of a two-state solution to the Palestine problem.

The change, which began on the left of the Israeli political spectrum, is moving toward the centre, provoking hard responses from right-wing Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who is sticking to his refusal to talk with the Perhaps the most telling sign of the new Israeli attitude toward the PLO was the publication recently of a report by Israel's leading think-tank on strategic affairs. The report said that peace negotiations would Shift in mainstream opinion

"As long as the PLO maintains the moderate course it developed in late 1988, an Israeli policy that rejects unconditionally any dialogue with it does not appear to be sustain able over time." the report asserted. "It would generate increasing unrest within Israel, a sharp conflict with world Jewry, and Israel's own growing isolation."

The report, which did not rule out the eventual establishment of a Palestinian state next to Israel, was rejected by Shamir. He said its findings harmed Israel and strengthened its Finance Minister and Labour Party leader

Energy Minister Moshe Shahal said he would agree to talk with PLO if it committed itself in writing to a total renunciation of terrorism, recognition of Israel, acceptance of UN Security Council Resolution 242 (which implicitly recognises Israel), and relinquishment of the "right to return" of Palestinian refugees to their homes (from which they fled during the 1948 war) inside Israel.

Minister of Communications Gad Yaacobi said talks with PLO chief Yasser Arafat could take place if Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip chose him as their represen-

Last month, several key figures of the Labour Party, including Peres' deputy and advisor, Yossi Beilin, met in East Jerusalem with leading Palestinian supporters of the PLO from the West Bank. Members of the centrist Shinui Party also met with pro-PLO Palestinians, and spokesmen for the party have already pronounced talks with the PLO as inevitable.

GCC ministers to discuss oil strategy

NICOSIA, April 12, (Agencies): Six Gulf Araboil ministers are to meet in Saudi Arabia on April 26, an official of their regional organisation said yesterday. The Gulf Co-operation Council official at the GCC's Riyadh headquarters said by telephone the ministers of OPEC states Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar and non-OPEC producers Oman and Bahrain will meet in Jeddah.

The ministers are expected to co-ordinate stands on price and production levels ahead of a June meeting of OPEC.

Oil experts from non-OPEC oil producing states will hold a meeting on May 16 in London to discuss the current developments on the international oil market and the appropriate measures that should be endorsed toward stable oil prices, an official OPEC source said yesterday.

It is predicted that the non-OPEC experts would focus their attention on the future co-operation between their countries and OPEC members to realise stable

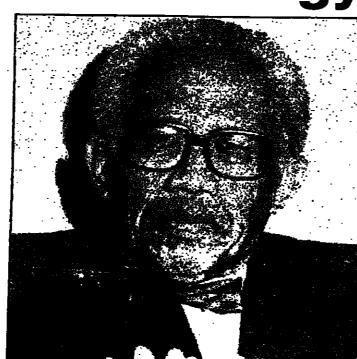

Producers

OPEC Secretary-General Dr Subroto had stated last March on the eve of the meetings for the pricing and strategy committee that the joint ministerial meeting between OPEC and independent gil producers would not be held beforkligg is.

The OPEC news agency if (OPECNA) quoted deputy chairman of the Egyptian oil company Hammad Ayoub as which will attend the experts meeting are Angola, China, Colombia, Egypt, Malaysia. Mexico and Oman.

Ayoub added that Norway. North Yemen, the Soviet Union. the Canadian province of Alberta and the American states of Texas and Alaska will send observers to the London meetings.

The Egyptian oil official expressed to the agency his pleasure over the slowly-rising reit prices, indicating that the recent development is a direct result of OPEC's adherence to last November's agreement in respect to the production ceiling

Independent oil producers had agreed to cut down their oil exports by five per cent, over 290,000 barrels per day, during the second quarter of 1989 to back up OPEC's efforts toward stabilising prices.

A joint ministerial meeting between the two sides was scheduled for late last March, but it was postponed for further consultations to better serve the stability of prices and in turn the interest of the two parties.

OPEC circles had described the move by the independent producers to reduce their exports as a positive step, but stressed that it was not enough to establterm co-operation between the two sides.

But analysts say that non-OPEC oil states do not seem to be enthusiastic about the joint meeting at the present time, since prices are on an upswing.

Bid to improve oil sector

Saddam calls for new incentives

BAGHDAD, April 12, (Agencies): President Saddam Hussein of Iraq has called for the introduction of an incentives system in the oil sector, linking wage levels with productivity, in order to increase revenues and strengthening the country's economic potential Receiving Oil Minister Issam Abdul Raheem Al Chalabi and officials in charge of oil installations yesterday, the President We have to link the wages of oil sector personnel with the level of productivity they achieve qualitatively and quantitatively. "Any additional effort you make an increase the country's revenues will have a historical effect on the people's lives," the President said.

He described Iraq's 1972 nationalisation of its oil industry "as a turning-point" that laid Iraq's policy on a new path which provided the cornerstone for later progress in all walks of life. Paying tribute to the accomplSaddam said, "Yet the door is still open for further achievements within your own capabilities."

Chalabi said Iraq would launch an energy-saving campaign as it now wasted about a quarter of locally-consumed energy. "Look at my office," he said, gesturing at the walls. "Neon strip lighting everywhere and it's of no use at all."

He said that for the first time the government would talk to the public about the need to conserve energy. "In the next two months, we will open special offices and put messages in the newspapers, on the radio and on television,"

Chalabi said Iraq consumed about 300,000 BPD of its OPEC quota of 2.64 million, but be expected consumption to decline as the Gulf war ceasefire reduced Iraq now had production said, and was rebuilding its wardamaged deep water Gulf oil export terminals. He predicted they would probably reach their pre-war capacity of about 2.5 million BPD by the end of 1990.

Pipeline

Iraq is due to complete the second stage of a pipeline across Saudi Arabia to the Red Sea in September, adding 1.15 million BPD of capacity to an existing 500,000 BPD line. It has two pipelines through Turkey with total capacity of 1.5 million Chalabi said the end of the war with Iran and new refining capacity was likely to lead to the closure of several small Iraqi refineries.

"Nowwehave 600,000 BPD of refining capacity, but we will certainly look at efficiency and being economical of the refineries. We will close down small ones." he said.

Iran, Riyadh urged to co-operate for price stability

NICOSIA., April 12, (Reuter):

the Iranian news agency IRNA

The English-language Tehran Times in an editorial "has urged Iran and Saudi Arabia to bolster the present relative consistency in oil prices through making further rapprochements in econ-omic standings between the two OPEC wings," IRNA said. Iran and Saudi Arabia lead two different camps within the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and have had no diplomatic relations since April 1988.

Capacity

Iran, with a limited production capacity due to war-damage to its facilities, wants output restraints by OPEC to boost prices in the short-run. Saudi Arabia, with huge crude reserves opts for increasing OPEC's market share in the medium-run, and does not want sharp price increases

Tehran Times, calling OPEC's November ministerial meeting a success, said the strategy followed by Iranian and Saudi oil ministers "helped curba negative reaction on the part of the market and raise the prices to a rather unexpected level."

The editorial has attributed the jump in the crude oil prices to closed-door agreements between Iranian and Saudi ministers, but it posed the question whether Tehran-Riyadh agreements will still hold in the June session," IRNA said.

Will Iran defend its $20 a barrel proposal and will the Saudis continue to defend their market-related quota strategy?" IRNA quoted Tehran Times as

Police crack down on black market

CAIRO, April 12, (Reuter): Egyptian police have arrested 30 illegal currency dealers in a crackdown on the country's revived black market, Al Ahram newspaper reported.

About two million Egyptian pounds ($800,000) were confiscated in arrests which occurred throughout the country during the past week, the paper said in its today's early edition.

Corneback

The currency black market has been staging a comeback after being subdued for nearly two years. High demand for dollars has forced the pound to unprecedented lows and bankers in Egypt expect further declines.

Black market dealers are buying dollars at rates of about 2.90 pounds, while the rate on the official free market set up in 1987 is 2.47 pounds. The official rate is set daily by a committee of bankers.

Dollar edges higher

Gold sinks

LONDON, April 12, (AP): The US dollar edged higher against major foreign currencies in light European trading early today. Gold prices were lower.

Dealers said they expected the dollar to trade within a narrow range, squeezed by dollar demand and fears of intervention by central banks, before Friday's release of several key US economic indicators.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.23 Japanese yen to a closing 132.85 yen. Later, in London, it eased to 132.80 yen.

But by late morning, most of the broad-based euphoria from the link-up dissipated, leaving only pharmaceutical and health and household stocks alight. "I think the market retreated

Unemployment climbing

Labour disputes simmer

BEIJING, April 12, (Reuter): Strikes and labour unrest are on the rise in China and may force the government to relax its austerity programme despite the threat of even higher inflation. Western analysts said.

Official figures showing a renewed surge in industrial growth in March and rocketing money supply suggest that the central government has already eased its grip.
A trade union spokesman confirmed today that strikes were increasing, partly because of the central government's austerity programme launched last September to curb inflation. Unemployment is climbing and some state-owned enterorises are effectively bankrupt and unable to pay their workers, Shen Zuying of the All-China

Egypt launches new round of economic reforms

CAIRO, April 12, (Reuter): Egypt has launched a new round of economic reforms designed to please foreign creditors but bound to be unpopular at home, Western economic analysts said on Tuesday.

The sources said Egypt has raised domestic prices on electricity and some oil products by 30 to 40 per cent in a move long urged by the US government and the World Bank. The April electricity hikes have not been announced by the government of President Hosni Mubarak, which is worried that dramatic overall price shifts could spur unrest of the sort that caused havoc in Cairo and other cities in 1977. The sources, who did not want to be identified, said Egyptian officials had protected low.

income groups from a jolt by staggering the hikes according to consumption levels. Most of the burden of electricity rate increases, due to appear on bills at the end of the month, was placed on industries rather than home consumers.

Cost Direct state subsidies. inherited from the socialist era of the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser some 20 years ago, cost the government about two billion Egyptian pounds ($800 million) per year. Hidden sub-sidies, concealed partly by artificially low electricity and fuel rates, cost billions more.

The handouts underpin a social contract established by Nasser that also guaranteed education, jobs and health care for all Egyptians. But as Egypt's. population has soared to 54 million, the promises have proved difficult to keep. Mubarak is cautiously steering his economy from a shiggish

Soviet model to a Western-style free market system. But he has resisted fast cuts in subsidies, on which the vast numbers of poorer people depends to buy basic foods, electricity and fuel. When he raises prices, he does so surreptitiously, leading some observers to call them "stealth hikes" after the US reconnaissance plane designed to avoid detection. The method has been attacked by some Egyptian critics, who say unannounced steps appear to

UK stocks steady but off highs at midsession

LONDON, April 12, (Reuter): Share prices were steady but off earlier highs achieved after news of Beecham's planned merger with Smithkline Beckman of the US.

Beecham was 20p up at 621 from an earlier high of 646p. The company also forecast a 17 per cent rise in profits for the year to March 1988. However, analysts say this is only marginally higher than existing market forecasts.

Third World, rich states get to grips with trade piracy

GENEVA, April 12, (Reuter): Rich and developing countries are finally getting to grips with the complex and sensitive issue of trade piracy after arguing for more than two years over how to go about it.

A compromise agreement allowing substantive negotiations to proceed on protecting patents, copyrights, trade secrets and inventions in international commerce was overshadowed by accord on the crucial issue on farm trade reform in the Uruguay round of world trade talks last weekend.

But deep differences between industrialised and Third World nations over safeguarding socalled intellectual property rights had also been a major obstacle to progress midway through the global negotiations, aimed at setting international trade patterns for the next century.

Carefully phrased proposals that Director-General Arthur Dunkel of the GATT trade forum drafted during more than. a week of intensive backstage talks got over the problem by effectively protecting the posi-tions of both sides without fully satisfying either.

The United States and other advanced nations, under pressure from influential pharmaceutical, electronics and other high technology industries, want new rules and enforcement procedures written into the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) to combat commercial piracy that they say costs them billions of dollars annually.

Developing nations, headed by India and Brazil, fear that tight new regulations will deny them the technology they need to

Saudi riyal deposits steady in duli market

NICOSIA, April 12, (Reuter): Saudi riyal interbank deposits remained steady in a dull market, with many operators sidelined ahead of US economic statistics due tomorrow and Friday. Rival deposits often closely Spot-next firmed to 8-1/2, 3/8 per cent from opening levels of 8-1/4, eight. This was one point down from Tuesday's levels but reflected technical adjustment ahead of the Gulf Friday week-

One-week edged up 1/8 point to 9-7/8, 3/4 per cent, with deals reported at 9-3/4.

Fixed periods were quiet, with the one-month put unchanged at 9-15/16, 3/4 per cent, three-months at 10-3/16, 1/16, six-months at 10-7/16, 5/16 and one-year at 10-3/4, 9/16.

The spot riyal eased to 3.7515/ 18 to the dollar but this was also due to a split value date ahead of Meanwhile, Kuwaiti dinar deposit rates eased marginally in the fixed periods in quiet trade today after a KD100 million ($345 million) treasury bill offering failed to attract much demand by banks, dealers said. However, some shorter dates firmed.

The 91-day bills, offered for issue today, carried an average yield of only 7.878 per cent compared to three month deposit rates of 9-3/8 nine per cent. "It seems apparent the central bank took up all the issue," said one dealer. "Because of that, there was no money going out of the system.

Jordan and IMF to sign letter of intent soon

AMMAN, April 12, (Reuter): Debt-burdened Jordan will shortly sign a letter of intent with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to undertake a mediumterm programme of economic reforms, the official news agency Petra said yesterday.

"The programme includes adopting financial, monetary and investment policies that aim at achieving a balanced growth in the economy through lowering the budget deficit, improving the balance of payments and boosting foreign exchange reserves," it quoted Prime Minister Zeid Al Rifai as saying.

Rifai, briefing heads of com-mercial banks on Sunday on two weeks of debt rescheduling talks with the IMF, said the letter of intent would be signed in the coming few days, Petra reported.

Crisis

A financial crisis, exacerbated by a fall in Arab aid and lower remittances from Jordanians working abroad, has forced Jordan to halt some payments on its civil and military debt.

A senior Jordanian official told Reuters the economic reform programme would be spread over five years, but further cuts in public expenditure would have to be made this year.

He said the letter of intent would qualify Amman to approach the Paris Club of official creditors to reschedule its debts. He expected these talks could begin before the end of Jordan's gift to 'intifada'

Play marks birth of political theatre

By Jamai Halaby

AMMAN, Jordan, (AP): A young Palestinian armed with a slingshot stands in the spotlight and peers out at the Arab audience. "If they are relatives and friends, why don't they come with us to liberate Palestine?" He asks the father standing next to him.

It's a provocative question to raise on stage in the Arab world, and one reason that the play "The Land That Called Its People" has become an unusual theatrical success in Jordan, a country where plays are rare and political drama almost nonexistent.

The play, 'Al-Bilad Talbat Ahilha' in Arabic, is the largest production yet staged in Jordan that deals with the Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories next Since opening last month, it has drawn thousands of spectators to the Royal Cultural Centre in Amman, a city where people generally prefer to stay home watching television with their families.

"It is one of Jordan's greatest gifts to the intilada' (uprising) and the Palestinian people everywhere," said one spectator, 31-year-old Mohammed Ibrahim.

"I am happy that our political ideas are being expressed publicly." said Ibrahim, who said he hoped that the play "marks the birth of a more democratic and free society in this part of the Arab world."

Hani Al-Amad, secretary-general of Jordan's Ministry of Culture, said the play "has portrayed the Palestinian cause in a serious political frame probably for the first time in the Arab world.

Politics are touchy in Amman, whose Palestinian majority is claimed both by Jordan and by the Palestine Liberation Organisation, although the two are politically allied. The country's security forces bave stifled most demonstrations in support of the uprising, while the country's leadership has repeatedly expressed support for it.

"I really wanted this play to be inaugurated in Jordan," said producer Zuheir Al Noubani, who also plays the star role of Abu Al Izz, an elderly Palestinian village leader.

Before it was accredited here, I took it to five other Arab countries and obtained approval. And when I brought it here there were some comments (objections). I told them that it was their prerogative. . "I will show it abroad, but I still insist that it is shown in Jordan and this worked,"

The play recessed early in April. But Noubani said it would probably resume its run later in the month. He said he plans to take the play to Europe and the United States, and to have it filmed in Chicago.

The playwright, Abdul-Latif Aqel, developed his craft on the Israeli-occupied

West Bank, where Palestinian nationalist theatre developed at venues such as Jerusalem's Al-Hakawati theatre. But he shied away from terming the play

Aqel called it "a comprehensive artistic work which equally consisted of philosophical, sociological, psychological and political elements.'

The story focuses on Abu Al Izz, head of a Palestinian village called "Umm El-Zaytoon." or "Mother of the Olives," who is invited to address and elitist, Western-oriented club about the Israeli occupation.

In his address, Abu Al Izz attacks Israel's treatment of Palestinians and decries the Palestinians' own inability to free themselves from the occupier's grip.

He also criticises the Arabs, both government and people, for their inability and unwillingness to fight with Palestinians to liberate Palestine and their insufficient commitment to the Palestinian cause.

In one scene, Abu Al Izz's teen-age son, one of the young combatants of the intifada, comes to call his father back to the village, where fighting has erupted.

The son asks his father who the audience is. When Abu Al Izz says they are friends and relatives, the boy asks why they are not aiding the Palestinian struggle.

Agel said he wanted to tell the audience that they have to stand strong with the intifada, not only by giving financial donations, but by moving personally along with the people of the uprising.

What I mean is that they have to fight with Palestinians to liberate the lands."

THE Kuwait International Hotel invited its long staying guests to a rather unusual place - the hotel's laundry! Brilliant portrait of Beirut families

By Arenad All River in Karachi recently screened a most unusual documentary feature: Beirut: The last home movie is, to say the least, an unorthodox addition to the list of war movies. Produced, directed and co-written by Jennifer Fox, and winner of many international awards, Beirut is perhaps the most apolitical film ever made about that war-torn city. Unlike other war movies that depend on scenes of graphic violence in order to get their message across, this particular effort deliberately avoids addressing the conflict directly. Instead, it focuses on the people who are living through an endless and absurd

"I chose not to show the Palestinians' camps. War doesn't look good on documentary camera. Besides, there are 17 officially recognised factions involved in this war, and nobody seems to know what the war is about,' Fox comments. Instead, she chose to document the lives of the members of a single family. as they struggled in the face of relentless violence.
The Bustros family comprising three sisters. Gaby, Nyla and Mouna, their brother Fady, and their mother Mimi lives in a massive 200-yearold palace, reminiscent of houses from the Ottoman empire. The house is situated in Christian Ashrafia, only one kilometre from the Green Line, a strip of land that separates West from East known as the Wall Street of Lebanon, the Green Line is now one of the war's most central battiegrounds, and one of the city's most incendiary areas. The Bustros can afford to move out to a safer place, but they refuse to do so. Instead, they keep planning to repair the damage to the house caused by repeated bombings. Gaby, who returns from the United States to persuade her family to move out gradually gets convinced that staying back was the only logical thing to do. The family even talks enthusiastically about the celebration of Fady's upcoming wedding. "Nothing must be changed until we are stopped," they say.

This insistence on staying back and defying the war seems to have given the family a new sense of purpose, and to have brought them closer as a family. By focusing on the dynamics of the Busicos' interactions. Fox has tried to expose the dilemma of a nation facing total disintegration.

Awards, talent shows keep stars busy

By Firoze Rangoonwalla

IT appears that filmdom gone stale by hackneyed celebrations wanted something new to chew upon. This grist was provided by a private company's talent contest, a magazine awards function and a felicitation by a club of

All these were different in their own ways, because the sponsoring parties did not belong to the film world. So at least their approach was fresh and they thought of some surprise twists which became the talk of tinsel town. Of course, film people were associated in one way or the other, so at times they got the centre stage and stole the limelight with their own tricks.

The All-India Bagpiper Silver Screen Acting Talent Contest, as it was called, got off to a flying start. Aided by the United Breweries Group, Virgin Advert-ising and Herbertsons Ltd., the talent hunt is doing the rounds of the country through Madras, Delhi and Calcutta, topped by the final round in Bombay.

The results are bound to be interesting, with a Prince (hero). a Princess (heroine) and a Legend (character artiste) being crowned the winners. Сгаzе

The craze for entering films is so great that the organisers received 18,000 applications from all over India, including even the rural areas. There were more males than females which is welcome, because women already have the Miss India and Beauty Queen contests to catch the eye of producers. Male talent has to knock at the doors and struggle to get their worth established. The conditions of aspiring character actors is even worse.

Thus the Bagpiper people are playing the right tune by searching for these various talents. The only flaw is that they have limited the final scope to just three people. Yet, as Naaz Rovshen, the head of Herbertsons explained, they will have a hundred runnersup, who will get a wide exposure at each centre.

Every round will have a variety entertainment programme or a fashion show, to show off the aspirants. Each will get a chance

A flood of new talents can relieve the present situation. Last time, when the United Producers had held a big contest, people like Rajesh Khanna had been discovered. Why did Rekha do all this? Since Amitabh did not come, she, felt frustrated and wanted to do a stunt, like Shabana did at the Delhi film festival. The jury which decided the award also had Jaya Bachchan (though she did not attend any meeting). It seemed Rekha wanted to prove Jaya's judgement wrong. By suggesting the award for Waaris, Rekha wanted to show the noble gesture to a dead artiste and also claim credit for her own work.

She had dubbed all of Smita's dialogue and she wanted to prove that her voice was responsible for half the performance. We shudder to think what other stunt Rekha would have done, if Amitable had come to the function, or if Jaya had accompanied him as the juror. It was Dilip Kumar along with Saira who provided a saving grace to the award function, which was not as star-studded as last year's. Ashok Kumar, Rajendra Kumar, Shammi Kapoor, Manoj Kumar from the old and Asha Sachdev, Swapna, Kiran Juneja and Ektaa of the young lot were the only stars

Dilip was given a special "Life Achievement" award at the hands of Ashok Kumar, who deserved it better for his longer career. In his passionate speech, Dilip pleaded for the industry to be freed from heavy taxes. As it stands, a producer was getting back only four rupees from every hundred earned at the box-

And then, there was an interesting function by Cinegoers' Club to mark the completion of its twenty years. Its dynamic secretary Shyam Kajaria hit upon the idea of felicitating Jeetendra, not for his staying power but his performance as a bold honest journalist in New Delhi. Not all may agree with the film or performance being super, but good old Jeetu certainly deserves a pat for surviving so long in the industry. Though other stars were not present, journalist M.V. One evening, wild rumours swept newspaper offices that Amitabh was dead or at least seriously injured in accident. The rivals thought they would get it in print. But the papers checked the news and ignored it.

wants control of money

Colorado, April 12, (AP): US Olympic Committee President Robert Helmick is leading an effort by the USOC to gain control of the Olympic foundation and its $160-million investment portfolio.

The Colorado Springs Gazette
Telegraph, a daily newspaper, reported that Helmick contends the USOC could save $350,000 by absorbing functions of the foundation's Colorado Springs office into the USOC.

The Olympic foundation was chartered in 1984 to invest a surples of $110 million from the Los Angeles Summer Games and a programme of selling commemorative Olympic coins. Since then, the investment portfolio has grown to $160 million.

The Gazette Telegraph reported Sunday that Helmick wants the USOC to assume the foundation's day-to-day office duties while maintaining the foundation as a separate entity.

"Our objective is to cut out duplication and cut out as much of that $350,000 annual overhead as possible," said Helmick.
"We don't think we need to have separate offices, separate photocopiers, separate tele-

Helmick said his proposed action is likely to create a conflict between him and Olympic foundation president F. Don Miller, who once was the USOC's executive director.

The move to absorb the foundation and eliminate the foundation office, as well as to change Miller's position from president to president Emeritus, first was proposed in February. The USOC administrative committee asked the executive board to consider the proposal. The motion was not acted upon at that time to give foundation officials an opportunity to res-

Tyson slugs parking lot attendant

LOS ANGELES, April 12, (UPI): Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson allegedly slugged a Hollywood nightclub parking lot attendant in the stomach in a dispute on Monday over a parking spot, authorities said.

The attendant, Michael Devine, 33, was not seriously hurt in the incident.

Devine filed a battery complaint against Tyson after walking into the Hollywood division police station about 1:45 a.m. (0545 GMT), department spokeswoman Margie Reid said.

She said police had obtained no independent confirmation the boxer was involved in the incident. Officer Don Lawrence, another department spokesman, said detectives had not interviewed Tyson Monday but planned to talk to him at some point.

Confirmed A spokesman for Tyson's adviser Don King confirmed the fighter was at the club, but said he could provide no details of the incident. Repeatedly efforts to reach Tyson's lawyer, Howard Weitzman, were unsuccessful.

According to Devine's complaint, three men in a white Mercedes-Benz pulled into the parking lot of the Palace nightclub and parked in the owner's space, Reid said. Devine approached the driver and told him he couldn't park in the spot, Reid said.

During an argument that followed, the passenger, who Devine identified as Tyson, "struck the victim in the stomach with the back of his hand," Reid said. The three men then walked into the club.

When he filed his police report nearly two hours later, Devine said "he experienced some pain at the time" of the alleged attack, "but was not in pain at the time of the report," Reid said. He did not require medical attention, she added.

Tyson has had previous runins with parking lot attendants.

Problem In June 1987, he allegedly put his arms around an 18-year-old female parking attendant at the

Greek theatre in Los Angeles'

Griffith Park and said," give me a kiss."

The woman's supervisor drove by in an electric cart, saw the tussling and asked her if she was having a problem. Tyson allegedly threw a concert T-shirt at the man's face and struck him with the butt of his open hand. The man suffered a cut lip and

Tyson was charged with misdemeanor count of battery and assault with a deadly weapon his hands. An out-of-court settlement in excess of $100,000 was reached three months later. The heavyweight champion was last in the ring Feb 25, when he knocked out England's Frank Bruno to keep his undisputed title. The fight came 11 days after he travelled to the Dominican Republic to obtain a divorce from actress Robin Givens. A week before Givens filed for divorce last Oct 7, she told television interviewer Barbara Walters that life with Tyson was "torture"... pure hell ... worse than anything I could possibly imagine." Family members said Tyson beat Givens.

Liverpool return to the top of League

LONDON, April 12, (AP): Goals by John Barnes and John Aldridge gave Liverpool a 2-1 road victory at Millwall last night and sent the defending English League champion back to the top of the standings on goal difference from Arsenal.

Liverpool, which plays in the FA Cup semifinals next Saturday and is on course for another League and Cup double, won its 11th straight game as it rallied after conceding an eight-minute Danis Salmon goal to take all three points.

Barnes tied it at 21 minutes with a header and Aldridge struck a controversial winner four minutes before halftime.

The Millwall players and fans reacted angrily to the goal, Aldridge's 22nd of the season, claiming John Barnes was clearly offside in the build-up. The linesman in fact had raised his flag for offside but it was ignored by the referee, who let the goal stand.

Millwall surged forward in the second half and Dean Horrix hit the bar. But the defending champion held out and climbed on to 63 points from 32 games, the same total as Arsenal but with a superior goal difference. Liverpool and Arsenal meet April 23 in what could be a championship decider. At the other end of the First Division, bottom club West Ham's chances of survival worsened still after a 2-1 home defeat against Middlesbrough.

Kevin Keen gave West Ham the lead midway through the first period but Bernie Slaven scored twice in the last six minutes to condemn the Hammers to another loss and keep them six points adrift at the bottom.

UEFA gives English clubs permission to compete in Europe
